Letter of Agreement

The University of Delaware Little Masters Project (LMP) offers free weekly private lessons and musical instruments to selected underserved students in the greater Wilmington and Christiana area, culminating in public performances. Founded and directed by the Delaware Governor’s Award recipient and UD violin professor Xiang Gao, LMP is being offered through the support of the Master Players Concert Series at the University of Delaware (MPCS) and independent donors of MPCS. The goal of LMP is to enrich students’ lives by improving their music abilities which will in turn improve their self esteem, concentration, appreciation for beauty and the arts, and overall positively impact their classroom performance.

Instruments will be provided to students at no cost to them. All instruments will be given to students in good playing condition. Students will also be provided with all necessary accessories for the instruments. The instruments will be given to the students to keep upon successful completion of the program. The instruments cannot be sold for any reason. If a student grows out of their current instrument size, they must return it and exchange it for a larger size instrument. Should the student fail to complete the program, they are to return their instruments to MPCS.

If a student misses more than three lessons, they will no longer qualify for the program and will be required to return their instrument for the next person on the waiting list.

The instrument should not be stored in a hot or cold environment, left out in the sun, in the car, or near water or a heater. When not in use, the instrument should always be in its case, which should always be locked. The instrument and case should be handled gently and never dropped. MPCS will cover the cost of reasonable repairs only. Instruments should always maintain a name tag on the case.

Students must commit to weekly lessons (45 minutes each), theory classes and weekly group coaching for chamber ensembles (45 minutes). Students must arrange for their own transportation to and from the University of Delaware each week. Students will select to attend one of the two sessions on Sunday: 10:00 am - 12:00 pm or 1:00 pm - 3:00 pm. Each student must practice for a total of five hours each week and show improvement in order to continue with free lessons. Students must also learn their assigned repertoire and prepare to perform in the upcoming public concerts assigned by MPCS, if selected.

All LMP teachers will obtain criminal background checks and be trained prior to the start of lessons.
LMP lessons will take place at the University of Delaware. When the students are not in lessons, students must stay with the student coordinator in the LMP homeroom. Students must do their homework or participate in group activities while not in lessons.

Students will also be required to fill out an emergency contact form that will be kept on file both with the student coordinator at the University of Delaware as well as in the MPCS office at UD.

Students and parents must complete the photo/video release form and return it upon acceptance to the program.

LMP is only available to students of families with financial challenges to afford weekly private lessons.
